People first

A new direction for Europe

The voters of Europe face a fundamental political choice in these European elections.

At a time when people across Europe are facing unprecedented challenges – an economic recession and rising unemployment resulting from the global financial crisis, high food and fuel costs, decreasing purchasing power and an increasing risk of poverty, climate change, and security threats ranging from terrorism to crime - it is a choice between political parties with very different ideas for the future of the European Union.

It is a choice between our vision of a progressive Europe in which citizens, member states and institutions work together to address the issues of greatest concern to the people of Europe; or a conservative Europe in which the future of our countries and people is left in the hands of the market.

The Party of European Socialists is committed to creating a fairer, safer society, tackling the challenges we all face by putting people first.

In today's increasingly inter-linked world, no one country can solve global problems by acting alone. The financial crisis and subsequent economic recession are demonstrating starkly that events in one part of the world can have a devastating impact on our own doorstep. Concerted European action is vital to deal with the financial crisis. Reactionary opponents of the European Union would have left our countries weaker, fighting a global crisis without partners or institutions to develop a coordinated response.

For us, the European Union is the vital link in the era of globalisation. It puts our countries in a stronger position to solve global problems that have an impact locally. We need more active cooperation in Europe to tackle our common challenges and improve people's lives. The entry into force of the Lisbon Treaty, subject to ratification by all EU member states, would make Europe better able to tackle common challenges democratically, transparently and effectively.

It is now 30 years since the first direct elections to the European Parliament, which has a key role to play in realising our vision of a European Union which puts people first. The Party of European Socialists is your voice, promoting your interests and championing your causes. We are committed to:

- 1. Relaunching the economy and preventing new financial crises
- 2. New social Europe – giving people a fairer deal
- 3. Transforming Europe into the leading global force against climate change
- 4. Championing gender equality in Europe
- 5. Developing an effective European migration policy
- 6. Enhancing Europe's role as a partner for peace, security and development

48 Progressive left and centre-left parties in government at regional or national level are already making a 49 difference to people's lives. Where the left is in power, we can see real evidence of what socialists and 50 social democrats can achieve.

51
52 For the past five years, the conservatives have had a majority in Europe - in most EU Member States
53 and in the EU institutions. What have they done with it? Did they tackle the global financial crisis? Did
54 they address rising food and energy prices? Have they fought poverty and inequalities? Is society 55 fairer than it was five years ago? Did they support our initiatives to deliver more and better jobs? They 56 follow the market. We follow our convictions.

57
58 The conservatives often talk about economic and social crises as if they are unavoidable, a law of 59 nature. But there is nothing inevitable about them. It is about political choices. While we do live in a 60 time of global change and risk, we also live in a time of huge opportunity. We must promote better 61 cooperation in Europe to manage globalisation for the benefit of everyone. They say adapt to the 62 market. We say shape our future.

63
64 We need a strong progressive majority in Europe to introduce the progressive reforms that are 65 essential to secure the future well-being of European citizens and society as a whole. They are vital to 66 ease the pressures on people across the EU who are facing an everyday struggle to make ends meet
67 because of the economic recession; rising living costs; increasing unemployment, with almost 17
68 million people in Europe already out of work and many more in precarious jobs who are among the 69 first to be hit by slow growth; the ever-present risk of home repossessions; and social inequalities, with 70 some 78 million people – many of them children – living below the poverty line or at risk of poverty.

71
72 The global financial crisis has exposed the weaknesses of the unregulated market. These are very 73 difficult times in the global economy. The past year has seen two unprecedented shocks - the worst
74 credit crunch since the 1930s and a record surge in energy and food prices. We need active co-
75 operation in Europe and globally to co-ordinate action and tackle the problems in national and 76 international financial systems; and we need to take proactive action to transform the economy – 77 through investments in key priorities - to secure a prosperous and sustainable future for everyone in 78 Europe.

79
80 Conservatives have pursued a policy of blind faith in the market – serving the interests of the few 81 rather than the general public – and we are now seeing the damage that badly regulated markets can 82 do. But we know we can do something about this. We can relaunch Europe's economy and create a 83 fairer and safer society for all in a new social Europe.

84
85 Our comprehensive progressive reform agenda to transform European cooperation - based on our 86 values of equality, democracy, human dignity, solidarity, freedom and justice – can deliver the change
87 which the people of Europe so desperately need.

88
89 We socialists, social democrats and democratic progressives, share common values and a 90 common vision. We will work together for a fairer, safer and greener Europe. Together we are a 91 force for change.

The challenges

Europe is one of the richest regions of the world. Some argue that we can no longer afford high social standards, but Europe is the biggest common economic and labour market in the world and we have the capacity to ensure that it serves people, workers and businesses.

All Europe's citizens should have decent, quality work that enables them to enjoy a decent life. We must act to enable businesses to grow, and invest in more and better jobs and new technologies. Unlike conservatives, we reject the notion that employment and trade union rights are cost factors that can be neglected and dismantled as far as possible. Quite the opposite: they are vital to our economic success, as they contribute to motivating employees, improving the quality of jobs, promoting social harmony and fostering workforce participation in company decision-making. Conservatives claim that globalisation makes it necessary for people to work longer and harder. But we progressives know that globalisation does not make this inevitable – only bad politics does. It's about working smarter, not harder.

The global financial crisis and economic recession have hit people hard. The financial crisis has shown that unregulated global markets can have a direct impact on their lives: greater inequalities between overpaid executives and underpaid workers, and increased risks that people will lose their jobs or homes. We must act to help those who have been hit hardest get back on their feet. And we must prevent future financial crises by establishing better regulation of all financial actors. This crisis marks the end of a conservative era of badly-regulated markets. Conservatives believe in a market society and letting the rich get richer, to the detriment of everyone else. We believe in a social market economy that enables everyone in society to make the most of the opportunities globalisation offers. We believe in solidarity between generations, not right-wing individualism.

Climate change is the greatest long-term threat facing the world. It is a global problem that requires a global solution. Conservatives talk about climate change, but we believe in doing more than just talking. We want concrete and realistic action to protect the environment, and to transform our economy through new smart green growth and jobs.

Energy is now a fundamental security issue for Europe. We already import 50% of our energy, and this could rise to 70% by 2030. We must work together in Europe to increase our energy independence by developing environmentally friendly energy sources produced in Europe. Conservatives believe in business as usual, leaving it to the market. Some conservatives even deny the existence of climate change thereby ignoring overwhelming scientific evidence and acting irresponsibly in the face of the seriousness of the threat to our planet and people. We are committed to transforming Europe into the leading global force against climate change.

The EU is making efforts to manage migration, but we need to do more and better. Migration has brought us undeniable benefits, contributing to our wealth and prosperity. To ensure that we continue to enjoy the benefits of a more productive, prosperous and diverse society, we will work to stop illegal immigration across our borders and combat human trafficking. Legal migrants must have the same rights and duties as other workers. Asylum is a fundamental human right for those fleeing from persecution, which is why we will ensure that it is a firm and fair system which protects the vulnerable and exploited, and is not subject to abuse. Climate change will also provoke new migration from the poorest affected regions, which we must address. We must also enable immigrants to integrate for their benefit and for the benefit of the communities in which they live. The conservatives have played on the fear factor. We want humane answers to the challenges of legal and illegal migration.

The threats to democracy and citizens' rights have not gone away. Terrorism, crime and extremism cross European borders. We have to step up European action to prevent these developments from threatening the lives and freedoms of citizens within our borders, without compromising fundamental freedoms such as the freedom of expression or the protection of personal data. The EU must also act outside its borders to promote peace and development. This will increase our security while benefiting people in poorer countries. By acting together in the EU, member states will strengthen their voice and influence on world affairs. Conservatives talk about these principles of democracy, citizens' rights, security and development. We will invest all our efforts in making them a reality.

Working together in Europe we are stronger because:

- we share the biggest economy in the world – and can therefore create more and better jobs and reduce poverty by trading with each other on the basis of common standards;
- environmental challenges do not stop at national borders and therefore we can only fight climate change and its effects if we work together with the same goals;
- we can promote solidarity and cohesion, cornerstones of the European project from which we all gain. Free movement of labour should provide all workers with more freedoms and opportunities, benefiting the economies of the countries where these workers are based, while avoiding a brain drain from less prosperous regions. But it should never lead to reduced social standards or wage cuts designed to give one Member State a competitive advantage over others at the expense of workers;
- our police forces and judicial authorities can cooperate to fight crime and terrorism.

We want a strong and progressive Europe. Our people’s manifesto for a progressive Europe sets out the policies we need to do this, and turn the challenges we face into progress for all.

We can build a fairer society by putting people first.
Let’s take Europe in a new direction in June 2009.

The proposals

1. Relaunching the economy and preventing new financial crises

The global economic and financial crisis is hitting our economies and ordinary people all over Europe hard. Real wages and people’s purchasing power are being undermined. We will not stand by and watch these developments passively. The euro has played a very effective role in protecting European economies in the context of the global financial crisis. More must be done now simultaneously to reform the financial markets, counteract the recession and relaunch the economy to create new growth and jobs.

The threat of catastrophic climate change is also growing: if we do not act now, it will further damage the planet and directly affect our lives. We are convinced that fighting climate change can transform the European economy and create new smart green growth, jobs and prosperity for everyone in Europe. We firmly believe in the principles of sustainable development, based on mutually-reinforcing economic, social and environmental policies.

The EU is the biggest economic and labour market in the world. By working together, we will be in a stronger position to relaunch the economy through our smart green growth and jobs plan. Trade unions and employers have an important role to play in contributing to the realisation of smart green growth across Europe.

People must be helped through this transformation of our economies. It is imperative that our citizens – of all ages - have the opportunity to develop their skills, find new and better jobs as well as being able to work and study abroad. We believe that action at local, regional, national and European levels should be geared towards supporting people through transition and opening up new and better opportunities.

The European budget should be refocused on smart green growth and meeting future challenges. Because it is a budget of solidarity, it should serve to improve living standards and foster social cohesion and growth throughout Europe as well as supporting convergence of the least-developed EU regions, not least in the new member states.

217 Reforming the financial markets to serve the real economy, jobs and growth:
218

219 The turmoil in the financial markets revealed the true importance of European cooperation to prevent a 220 collapse of the banking system and stabilise the markets. Coordinated action in the EU has helped to 221 protect people's savings, pensions and homes. But the financial crisis has revealed deep-seated flaws
222 in the market system that need to be tackled to prevent such crises happening again. All financial 223 players should have clear responsibilities when they operate in our countries.
224

225 We will ensure that in future, the financial markets serve the real economy, jobs and growth.
226

- 227 1. Building on talks that have already taken place in the EU and at global level, we 228 propose to reform the financial markets. Regulation should cover all financial 229 players. We need a new standard for transparency and disclosure. There should 230 be rigorous capital requirements for all financial players, and limits on excessive 231 borrowing and bad loans to prevent excessive risk-taking and debt. Limits are also 232 needed on top executive pay and bonuses, notably so that earnings reflect losses 233 as well as profits. New rules are needed to prevent conflicts of interest. We must 234 ensure that workers have full rights to information and consultation during all 235 takeovers and that employees paying into pension funds know where and how 236 their money is being invested. The European system of supervision must also be 237 further improved. Financial institutions must state all risks on their balance sheets.
238 Detrimental short-selling made the crisis worse and should be curbed by 239 regulatory authorities. Hedge funds and private equity funds must be monitored
240 and regulated more effectively. The key issues are obligations to disclose asset 241 and regulatory structures, more stringent requirements to inform investors about 242 risks, the limitation of excess debt financing and restrictions on investments.
- 243 2. We propose to put an end to tax havens, tax avoidance scams and tax evasion, 244 and step up the fight against money laundering in the European Union and 245 globally so that all market actors pay their fair share of tax to the countries in 246 which they operate.
- 247 3. We propose to work with all our global partners towards reform of global financial 248 architecture in order to prevent the recurrence of a financial crisis and to make the 249 power of financial institutions subject to democratic scrutiny.
250

251 A European strategy for Smart Green Growth and Jobs:
252

253 We propose a European strategy for smart green growth and jobs which will create 10 million new jobs
254 by 2020 – with two million in the renewable energies sector alone – and help make Europe a world
255 leader in innovation, new green technologies and products. This would build upon the EU's existing 256 Lisbon Strategy to make Europe into the most dynamic and competitive knowledge-based economy in 257 the world, capable of sustainable economic growth with more and better jobs and greater social 258 cohesion. In the EU, all levels of government can work together to stimulate smart green growth,
259 notably through structural reform and fiscal policies. EU-funded investment projects should be swiftly
260 implemented to help achieve these goals. The following proposals are core elements of our strategy:
261

- 262 4. Transforming transport in Europe into the most efficient, affordable and 'clean' for 263 people and businesses. This includes building a more competitive and affordable 264 high-speed rail network between major European cities and regions, and focusing 265 on making it easier to switch between rail and other types of transport; creating an 266 integrated airspace to shorten flying times by allowing aircraft to take more direct 267 routes; making maritime and inland waterway transport cleaner, more efficient and 268 safer for workers and passengers; and transforming our city transport systems.
269 Social democrat mayors are leading the way with their 2008 Urban Mobility
270 manifesto: new schemes to save time and costs, and reduce pollution. We 271 propose European cooperation to exchange these best practices and promote 272 sustainable urban mobility across Europe, and will continue work to improve 273 safety on all types of transport.
- 274 5. We propose a European initiative to expand energy and broadband infrastructure
275 for the purposes of economic modernisation. Offshore wind farms, for example, 276 require new, cross-border grids. The development of rural areas depends on 277 access to broadband in every corner of Europe. Multi-billion investments in 278 developing networks are needed throughout Europe. The European Investment

279 Bank is already involved in the financing of energy as well as telecoms
280 infrastructure and could step up its commitment. Greater use of European 281 Structural Funds should also be considered.

- 282 6. Energy efficiency is one of the best ways to lower people's fuel bills and create 283 new jobs, for example in the building-insulation sector. We propose active
284 cooperation between the EU, governments, regional and local authorities to help
285 people cope with rising fuel prices by reducing their energy consumption, funding
286 energy efficiency improvements in homes, and ensuring that energy companies' 287 pricing and customer policies are fair and responsible.
- 288 7. Substantially raising investment in research, development and innovation will be 289 essential for new smart green growth and our long-term prosperity. Currently, the 290 US is spending one and a half times more than the whole of the EU put together.
291 Europe must catch up and take the lead.
- 292 8. We propose a European Pact for the Future of Employment. All European 293 programmes should be examined to see how employability and employment
294 opportunities can be safeguarded and improved. EU-funded investment projects
295 should be swiftly implemented. Advantage should be taken of the possibilities 296 offered by the European Social Fund for integrating the unemployed into the 297 labour market and for training workers. In a global economy, investments in 298 education are fundamental for growth and creating better-paid and better-quality 299 jobs. We propose to fund a Skills Programme through the current EU budget, to 300 train workers across Europe for, amongst other things, the 'green' jobs of the 301 future, such as in the renewable energy sector. We will also work towards full and 302 equal access to lifelong learning, with special attention paid to 'second-chance'
303 education and training for those who have not completed their formal education.
304 This can be supported by European, national and regional policies. We propose
305 to expand funding, within the current European budget, for education and training 306 exchanges to include, for example, apprentices and older people, building on the 307 success of the ERASMUS programme, and giving as many young people as 308 possible the chance to study abroad. Mobility should be the rule not the 309 exception. Every young European should have the chance to enjoy it.
- 310 9. The EU's Internal Market should be completed – and the red tape facing 311 businesses reduced - to generate more European trade and jobs, based on high
312 environmental and social standards. Small and medium-sized businesses (SMEs)
313 are the backbone of the European economy and the biggest employer of workers.
314 We should simplify the legal framework for SMEs through a statute for European 315 Private Companies, together with easier access to the Internal Market and to 316 financial and innovation resources. The capital base and credit volumes of the 317 European Investment Bank and the European Bank for Reconstruction and 318 Development should be increased and the granting of credits simplified for SMEs.
- 319 10. The European Central Bank must encourage growth and employment while 320 maintaining price stability.

321 Ensuring workers and businesses benefit from economic transformation:

- 322 11. We propose to support businesses to anticipate changes caused by climate 323 change and technological shifts – thereby safeguarding existing and creating new 324 jobs – while also helping workers retrain if they lose their jobs because of these 325 changes. This could be done, notably, through the EU's Globalisation Adjustment 326 Fund. We will also promote dialogue with Europe's employers to ensure that they 327 live up to their responsibility to anticipate change and re-skill their workforces.
- 328 12. We will support job creation by ensuring that businesses have access to credit to 329 invest and grow, for example through the European Investment Bank. We will also 330 support the development of the social economy in Europe, which currently 331 employs over 5 million people in cooperatives for example – by introducing a 332 European statute for associations, mutual societies and foundations.

336 A new European progressive reform agenda is essential to extend the opportunities of 337 globalisation to all citizens and make a positive difference to people's lives.

338
339 We can build a fairer society by putting people first.
340 Let's take Europe in a new direction in June 2009.

343 2. New social Europe - giving people a fairer deal

344

345 No matter who we are or where we were born, people in Europe share the same basic values about
346 the kind of society we want to live in: a safer Europe, with high living standards, decent and stable 347 work, and a safe and clean environment.

348

349 Existing inequalities and new global challenges are placing new pressures on people and creating a
350 risk of permanent social divides within our societies: between the children of poor and rich families;
351 between those with stable, well-paid jobs and those in precarious, low-quality jobs; between the low-
352 skilled and the highly-educated; between those with access to the Internet and those without; between 353 immigrants and native-born Europeans; between women and men.

354

355 We can tackle these inequalities by focusing European cooperation on improving the lives of people in 356 Europe. We must promote better policies to protect the most vulnerable people during the economic 357 recession and beyond. We want to build a new social Europe together with the social partners, 358 working particularly closely with the trade unions, who share our commitment to putting people first.

359

360 We believe democracy and citizens' rights in the European Union are crucial to ensure a fairer deal for 361 people. Citizenship should be inclusive, based on rights and responsibilities, as part of a shared future
362 on our continent. We want everyone living and working in Europe to participate in deciding their future.
363 We believe in empowering future generations, and in doing what we can to encourage political and 364 societal engagement. We pay close attention to the views of young Europeans, not least on issues
365 such as building a new social Europe, improving inter-cultural dialogue, climate change, Europe's role 366 in the world and globalization. We believe in active democratic consultation and participation, as we 367 have shown by consulting the public on the priorities for this manifesto.

368

369 The EU is based on human rights, non-discrimination and respect for all. We view diversity in its many 370 forms – cultural, linguistic and religious – as one of Europe's greatest assets.

371

372 The European economy has also brought many benefits for consumers. We will continue to champion
373 consumer rights in Europe following our success in securing safer food and toys, and cheaper travel
374 and phone calls. By improving consumer rights and protection, we can help to build a safer and fairer 375 Europe for our citizens.

376

377 Ensuring a fairer deal for people:

378

379 13. We propose to seek agreement on a European Social Progress Pact, proposing 380 goals and standards for national social, health and education policy to contribute 381 to the fight against poverty and inequalities as well as the social and economic 382 development of the EU. We demand needs-based social welfare benefits for all 383 those who are retired, unemployed or unable to work in all European countries, to 384 guarantee a life of dignity.

385 14. We propose to include a social progress clause in every piece of European 386 legislation, and to take into account social and environmental impact assessments
387 when developing European legislation. The process of liberalisation must be 388 assessed. We propose that the EU carries out a social audit of its environmental 389 and energy policies to develop measures to prevent these policies hitting the 390 poorest hardest.

391 15. We propose to establish a European framework for public services, guaranteeing 392 universal and equal access for citizens, quality, local autonomy and transparency 393 in public services, maintaining their integrity as defined at national level, so that 394 European competition and business rules do not run counter to citizens' rights.

- 395 The social and environmental criteria for awarding European public contracts 396 should be extended and strengthened.
- 397 16. We propose a European pact on wages, guaranteeing equal pay for equal work
398 and setting out the need for decent minimum wages in all EU member states,
399 agreed either by law or through collective bargaining and applying both to citizens
400 and migrant workers. Social rights include the right to a fair level playing field for 401 workers.
- 402 17. We will address the problems related to brain drain created by the migration of 403 highly-qualified professionals and skilled workers within Europe and from third 404 countries into Europe.
- 405 18. We will act in all EU member states to promote fair tax policies, which will 406 guarantee the financing of Europe's welfare states.
- 407 19. We will act to prevent the exploitation of workers and strengthen their rights to 408 collective bargaining. Recent European Court judgements have created 409 uncertainty about workers' rights and collective agreements. Together with the 410 social partners we will examine the impact of the Viking, Laval and other 411 judgements to ensure that rights are not undermined. A review of the EU Posting 412 of Workers Directive is essential. To encourage collective bargaining at European 413 level, we want to develop a European framework for cross-border collective 414 bargaining and collective agreements. In addition, we will work to promote decent 415 working time, meeting health and safety standards, and a fair work-life balance.
- 416 20. We propose to strengthen workers' rights to information and consultation.
417 Employee participation at European and global level is a key issue for the future -
418 a vital element of a more social Europe and a precondition for decent work. We 419 will seek to enhance participation in economic decision-making processes at 420 European level. To do this, workers' rights to information and consultation must be 421 anchored in company law directives using the European Company Statute model
422 and the rights of European Works Councils must be extended. We also want to 423 foster greater social dialogue between unions and employers at European level 424 and extend it to more sectors.
- 425 21. We propose to develop an EU strategy on children's rights to help eradicate child 426 poverty and guarantee access to education, including pre-school child care.
- 427 22. We propose to establish a European Charter for Internships, to give young people 428 seeking work experience better rights and ensure they benefit from a good start to 429 their working lives.
- 430 23. We propose to strengthen individual and collective consumers' rights and ensure 431 these are properly enforced in the European Union.
- 432 24. We propose setting EU targets for providing care for the elderly, modelled on 433 those already in place for childcare, in light of our ageing population and the need 434 to reach the goals of full employment and gender equality.

435
436 Protecting citizens' rights:

- 437
438 25. We will ensure that democracy, transparency and accountability are cornerstones
439 of all reforms of the European institutions. For example, we propose to strengthen 440 transparency by obliging all lobbyists and lobby agencies to register themselves,
441 their clients, and their activities, including all contacts with elected representatives, 442 as well as with civil servants and other officials.
- 443 26. We are committed to ensuring that EU legislation respects citizens' rights as 444 enshrined in the European Convention on Human Rights and in the Charter of 445 Fundamental Rights of the European Union. We will strengthen anti-discrimination 446 legislation to ensure equal treatment on grounds of gender, race, disability, age, 447 sexual orientation and religion or belief.
- 448 27. We propose to ensure equal treatment for all EU citizens, without discrimination,
449 when they move around the Union by moving towards recognition in all EU
450 countries of marriages, partnerships and parental rights legally recognised in one 451 of the Member States.
- 452 28. We advocate giving regions and local authorities a greater role in European 453 affairs, reflecting their growing role in implementing European policies and 454 promoting discussion of European questions at the sub-national level. We support

455 the recognition and fostering of Europe's cultural and linguistic diversity, as one of 456 its richest assets and a key part of its identity.

457
458 A new European progressive reform agenda is essential to build a new social Europe, giving 459 people a fairer deal.

460
461 We can build a fairer society by putting people first.
462 Let's take Europe in a new direction in June 2009.

464
465 3. Transforming Europe into the leading global force against climate change

466
467 We must tackle climate change now for the sake of our children and grandchildren. Taking action now
468 will enable Europe to take the global lead in developing new, efficient green technologies and reduce 469 the risk of a future loss of prosperity due to climate change. Not doing anything will put life on earth at 470 risk. Europe must therefore break its dependence on oil and coal and take the lead in achieving a new 471 global climate agreement for the post-2012 period to follow on from the Kyoto Treaty.

472
473 Successfully leading international negotiations for a global climate deal:

474
475 29. The EU should take the lead in international negotiations to get agreement on a
476 30% global target for emission reductions by 2020 at the United Nations summit
477 at the end of 2009. It is our common goal to ensure that all developed and 478 emerging economies, including the US, China and India, should sign up to this.
479 We are committed to a global approach based on solidarity, and with developed 480 countries taking the lead.

481 30. We propose to increase EU support for developing countries to fight as well as 482 adapt to climate change. The EU should ensure massive technology transfers to 483 ensure that these countries can fight poverty and develop economically without 484 worsening global warming. Furthermore, we must ensure that EU policies will not 485 lead to higher greenhouse gas emissions in third countries, by taking steps to 486 avoid the risk that energy-intensive industries will move to other parts of the world
487 where the climate change requirements are less strict.

488 31. Following on from the initiatives taken by Europe's social democratic 489 governments, the EU should take the lead in establishing a global energy and 490 development forum, bringing all the world's nations together to define a long-term 491 vision for energy and the sustainable development of the planet.

492
493 Leading by example - a more ambitious climate and energy policy for the EU:

494
495 32. We propose to introduce a comprehensive EU climate directive that would ensure 496 that targets and actions in all those sectors not already covered by existing law – 497 energy, agriculture, food, building and transport – are combined to enable the 498 Union to reach its overall emission targets. All other climate legislation should also 499 be adapted to meet the 30% emissions reduction target. Action is needed in every 500 sector if we are to reduce emissions in an efficient way.

501 33. We propose to develop a European Common Energy Policy based on 502 sustainability, energy security and independence, diversity of energy sources and 503 solidarity between member states in the event of energy crises. The EU should,
504 for example, increase its renewable energy supply by taking the lead in building a
505 High Voltage Electricity Transmission Network for the transportation of offshore 506 wind energy from Northwest Europe and solar energy from southern Europe and 507 North Africa.

508 34. We will support a modern Common Agricultural Policy that promotes 509 comprehensive rural development and values the fundamental role of farmers,
510 recognising the role of agriculture in protecting the environment, ensuring food
511 quality and security of supply, preserving the landscape, and protecting animal
512 welfare and plant health. Biofuels can help to lower emissions in transport, but this 513 should not come at the expense of European and global food production,

514 environmental protection or biodiversity. The EU's Biofuels Directive should be 515 revised to ensure respect of this principle.
516 35. It is for each Member State to decide on whether to use nuclear power. However,
517 given the importance of nuclear safety for all European countries, the monitoring
518 of existing and new nuclear power plants should be coordinated at the European 519 level.
520

521 A new European progressive reform agenda is essential to lead the global fight against climate 522 change.

523
524 We can build a fairer society by putting people first.
525 Let's take Europe in a new direction in June 2009.
526

527

528 4. Championing gender equality in Europe

529
530 Significant progress has been made towards achieving genuine equality between women and men in 531 recent years, largely thanks to the efforts of socialists, social democrats and democratic progressives 532 in partnership with progressive women's organisations.
533

534 There are, however, lingering inequalities: women still earn, on average, 15% less than men for doing
535 the same work; they are much more likely to be unemployed, discouraged from entering the labour
536 market by the lack of decent jobs, or in lower-paid, low-quality or part-time jobs.
537

538 Millions of women around the world still face exploitation and rights violations, in the form of human 539 trafficking, domestic violence and other abuses.
540

541 There are still too few women in politics over half a century after gaining the right to vote and stand for 542 election across Europe.
543

544 In some parts of Europe, men have hardly any rights to parental leave when their children are born.
545 Women often have to choose between having children and pursuing the career they want. Working 546 families find it hard to balance their professional and personal responsibilities. We can change this:
547 those European countries which have done most to increase women's rights and opportunities now
548 have the highest proportion of women in the workforce and the highest birth rates. We have also 549 campaigned relentlessly at local, regional and national levels to increase childcare places.
550

551 We will continue to fight gender stereotypes and believe that strengthening women's rights and 552 opportunities will bring significant economic, social and democratic benefits for all Europe's citizens.
553

554 Making gender equality a reality for all:

555
556 36. We propose to create a European Women's Rights Charter, to improve women's 557 rights and opportunities and to promote mechanisms to achieve gender equality in 558 all aspects of social, economic and political life.

559 37. We propose to introduce improved parental leave rights for men and women
560 across Europe up to the highest standards in Europe.

561 38. We will campaign for equal political representation of women and men in all
562 decision-making bodies at European level. We will campaign for a gender-equal 563 European Commission and a gender-equal European Parliament, and will call for 564 the creation of a European Commissioner for Gender Equality.

565 39. We will work to support parents so that they can balance their caring 566 responsibilities with their professional responsibilities. To support this goal, we 567 propose that member states achieve the existing EU target of 33% childcare 568 coverage for 0-3 year olds and 90% coverage for children from 3-school age, and 569 adopt complementary EU qualitative targets for childcare.

570 40. We will lead the fight to close the gender pay gap, which is vital to improve living 571 standards, fight poverty and increase economic growth.

572 41. We will encourage and support women entrepreneurs, scientists and researchers 573 to broaden their opportunities.

- 574 42. We will ensure and promote women's sexual and reproductive health rights
575 throughout the EU.
576 43. We propose to step up European efforts to eradicate human trafficking and sexual 577 exploitation through closer judicial and police cooperation.
578 44. We propose to encourage and support the EU and its Member States in their 579 efforts to stop domestic and gender-specific violence, including that perpetrated 580 against women of ethnic minorities, through all appropriate EU programmes and 581 funds.
582

583 A new European progressive reform agenda is essential to continue the work we have already 584 done in spearheading gender equality initiatives that help both women and men.
585

586 We can build a fairer society by putting people's first.
587 Let's take Europe in a new direction in June 2009.
588
589

590 5. Developing an effective European migration policy

591
592 Migration is one of the key challenges facing member states of the European Union. Europe's 593 progressives are committed to addressing this issue on the basis of our values of fairness, democracy, 594 human rights and solidarity.
595

596 Key challenges include the fight against illegal migration and human trafficking, ensuring a just asylum 597 policy for those fleeing persecution, achieving fair and responsible legal migration – based on 598 Europe's needs for labour and on migrants' rights – and enabling migrants to integrate into their new 599 communities with equal rights and responsibilities.
600

601 We understand people's concerns about migration. That is also why we want reforms. The answer is 602 not ghettos or xenophobia, but real reforms to ensure integration, fight illegal migration, illegal work
603 and human trafficking, and work to create a better life for people in poorer countries outside Europe
604 while preventing brain drain from developing countries.
605

606 Managing migration effectively:

- 607
608 45. We propose to establish common standards for legal migration into the European 609 Union, based on solidarity and burden-sharing, while fully respecting member 610 states' competences in this field.
611 46. We propose to establish a European Charter for the Integration of Migrants, 612 based on equal rights and responsibilities and mutual respect, which should be 613 coordinated closely with policies governing the admission of migrants. We want 614 an integration policy that establishes an ongoing process to achieve inclusive
615 citizenship and representation, as well as rights and duties for all citizens. Special 616 attention should be paid to integrating women, young people and the European 617 Roma population. We therefore propose to promote action at the appropriate 618 levels (local, regional, national or European), such as language or cultural 619 training, which supports the full integration of migrants in their new communities.
620 47. We propose to step up European efforts to combat illegal migration through a 621 common External Border Control Policy, improved cooperation to fight human 622 trafficking by criminal networks, and partnership agreements with third countries, 623 including readmission procedures.
624 48. We are committed to strengthening cooperation with third countries (including on 625 readmission procedures) in order to manage migration more effectively while 626 promoting the economic and social development of those countries. We propose 627 to deepen existing mechanisms, and create new ones, to address the 628 consequences for developing countries of the loss of skilled workers in key 629 sectors due to migration into the EU.
630 49. We support the further development of the Common European Asylum System, 631 based on fair asylum rules for those fleeing persecution and on international 632 human rights rules and burden-sharing amongst EU member states.
633

634 European cooperation is essential for an effective migration policy. This can only be achieved
635 with a strong progressive majority in Europe.

636
637 We can build a fairer society by putting people first.
638 Let's take Europe in a new direction in June 2009.
639

640 6. Enhancing Europe's role as a partner for peace, security and development

642
643 The EU should be a frontrunner in advancing peace and sustainable social and economic 644 development worldwide, as a cornerstone for human security. Citizens still face threats in today's 645 uncertain world. EU member states must work more closely together to ensure the security of our 646 countries and our peoples. We believe that Europe needs a stronger common voice in the world to 647 shape a better future for our citizens and the planet. We must work together for peace and 648 partnership, and to eradicate poverty, in solidarity with people across the world.
649

650 Europe is already an active global player, but we must increase our influence and impact by 651 coordinating our positions and speaking as much as possible with a single voice. Strengthening the 652 role of the EU High Representative for Common Foreign and Security policy will be an important step 653 forward in this respect. If we fail, the EU and its member states will become less and less relevant in 654 world affairs. Today's global governance institutions have proved themselves to be ill-adapted to new 655 global challenges. Therefore, we must take the lead in reforming global governance – in partnership 656 with the new Democratic administration in the US - on the basis of a strengthened cooperative and 657 multilateral approach.
658

659 The EU must step up its conflict-resolution, peace-keeping, and humanitarian efforts in crisis zones,
660 and develop capacities to assist countries after civil or environmental crises. We must remove the root
661 causes of conflict and terrorism in the world. Development policy towards poor, developing countries 662 must be targeted, innovative and based on the involvement of people at grassroots level. It should 663 notably support the important role of women as motors for development in these countries, for 664 example by extending access to microcredit schemes.
665

666 Promoting peace and security:

- 667
668 50. We propose that the EU should increasingly work on conflict prevention,
669 resolution and post-crisis management abroad, by improving European countries'
670 joint capacities and sharing the burden of peace-keeping missions in crisis zones,
671 within the framework of the United Nations.
672 51. We propose to strengthen police, judicial and security cooperation in combating 673 drug trafficking, crime and terrorism. Fighting against terrorism should be a top 674 priority and needs to be further strengthened as an EU objective, within the rule of 675 law and without compromising fundamental freedoms. We will continue to 676 promote a common European policy in this area, including the full implementation
677 of the European strategy against terrorism and support for the EU Special 678 Representative.
679 52. We propose to ensure that the EU establishes coherent disaster prevention tools.
680 53. We propose to step up European efforts to support international disarmament, 681 including strengthening international agreements on arms control and non-682 proliferation, and making the EU Code of Conduct on weapons exports more 683 restrictive and transparent. We want a world without nuclear weapons.
684 54. We propose that the EU actively promotes an Alliance of Civilisations through the 685 United Nations, strengthening dialogue and partnership between peoples and 686 cultures as a means to enhance world peace and security.
687 55. We propose to increase defence cooperation amongst European member states, 688 without affecting the characteristics of individual Member States' defence and 689 security policies. The new European defence initiative should be developed in 690 coordination with NATO.
691 56. We support the reform of the United Nations, particularly the UN Security Council, 692 as well as the revision of the decision-making process, mandate and functioning
693 of the World Trade Organization, the World Bank and the regional banks, and the

694 International Monetary Fund. The allocation of voting rights in the IMF must better 695 reflect the interests of developing countries, particularly the poorest amongst 696 them.
697 57. We will promote a moratorium in the application of the death penalty in the United 698 Nations.
699

700 Promoting partnership:

701
702 58. We believe the future of the Western Balkans lies within the EU, with stability 703 bringing prosperity and security. We welcome membership talks with Croatia and 704 support the start of EU membership negotiations with all other Western Balkans 705 countries once all the criteria have been met. We believe that the EU should 706 respect the fundamental rights of all peoples as well as supporting the 707 multicultural and multi-religious nature of European societies. We support an 708 open-ended process of negotiations with Turkey towards EU accession, based on 709 clear criteria, and that both Turkey and the EU should fulfill their respective 710 commitments.
711 59. Stability in countries neighbouring the EU is as important as enlargement. We 712 want to strengthen the EU's neighbourhood partnerships. We propose the 713 creation of a Black Sea Union and an Eastern Partnership to strengthen 714 cooperation with our Eastern neighbours. The EU must also hold a structured 715 dialogue with Russia, on issues including democracy, human rights, energy
716 security and closer cooperation, including a new Baltic Sea regional initiative.
717 60. We will continue to support the strengthening of Euro-Mediterranean relations.
718 The Union for the Mediterranean is the key instrument and framework for 719 promoting democracy, economic and social development and human rights.
720 Furthermore, we want the EU to play an active role in resolving conflict in the 721 Middle East – with the aim of achieving a two-state solution between Israel and 722 Palestine – not least by harnessing the efforts of the international community.
723 61. We propose that the EU develops its relations with the Latin American continent in 724 order to create a real and comprehensive partnership on all the relevant issues 725 and support its regional processes of integration.
726 62. We will continue to build a strong transatlantic partnership with the new 727 Democratic leadership of the United States of America.
728 63. The EU must deepen its relations with China, encouraging improved human 729 rights, and social and environmental standards, alongside a deepening of trade 730 relations.
731 64. We strongly support closer ties with India as an emerging global actor, based on 732 mutual respect and open dialogue.
733 65. We will work to fully implement and consolidate the Africa-EU Strategy to 734 strengthen relations, solve common challenges, conclude Economic Partnership
735 Agreements, and support the long-term development of Africa.
736
737

738 Eradicating poverty:

739
740 66. The new European Parliament's 2009-2014 term virtually coincides with the 741 remaining timeframe for reaching the 2015 United Nations Millennium Goals.
742 Progress to date has so far been primarily noted in the high-growth areas of Asia, 743 notably China, whereas Africa is still suffering from the detrimental effects of 744 extreme poverty. Rising food and fuel prices are also undermining the progress 745 made so far in many places. We will use this Parliamentary term to push for 746 efforts to reach the goals by 2015. We therefore propose to put international 747 development goals at the heart of EU policies on aid, trade and the reform of 748 global governance. New, innovative sources of financing are needed in addition to 749 delivering existing European aid commitments - notably, attributing at least 0.7%
750 of Gross National Income to development policy - in a more coordinated, efficient 751 and targeted way. We support decentralised cooperation in European 752 development policy, including the contribution that can be made by Europe's local

- 753 authorities. We will support the establishment of a European Voluntary 754 Humanitarian Corps.
- 755 67. The EU must support the multilateral trading system, to the benefit of developing 756 countries in the WTO Doha Development Round, and to ensure a fairer domestic 757 distribution of the benefits of trade opening, as well as guaranteeing better social 758 and environmental standards.
- 759 68. We propose to address the global food crisis by working to prevent further 760 speculation on food prices, and to promote food security by developing a new 761 generation of aid and agricultural production policies.
- 762 69. We shall work to ensure that all EU trade agreements include appropriate, 763 enforceable human, environmental and social rights clauses and that all trade
764 agreements with developing countries - such as Economic Partnership 765 Agreements - serve as a real tool for the economic and social development of the 766 countries and regions concerned.
- 767 70. We will work to promote the expansion of fair trade goods across Europe.
768 Promoting and raising awareness of fair trade measures will encourage 769 sustainable development and help to guarantee decent wages for those in the 770 developing world, contributing to improving the lives of millions of people 771 worldwide.
- 772 71. Decent work must become a global objective to which all countries as well as 773 international institutions and organisations are committed. This new global agenda 774 must uphold core labour standards as well as promoting decent working 775 conditions, adequate wages, social security and strengthened social dialogue.
776

777 A new European progressive reform agenda is essential to enhance the EU's role as a partner
778 for peace, security and development, for the sake of our own future development and security 779 as well as solidarity with other countries and peoples.

780 We can build a fairer society by putting people first.

Make your vote count in Europe in June 2009

In these European elections, every citizen's vote will count. Men and women across Europe face a choice between a progressive European Union in which member states work together to tackle the challenges we face in the interests of all the people of Europe, or a conservative European Union which leaves the future of our countries and people in the hands of the market.

But to introduce the wide-ranging progressive reforms that put people first and are essential to secure the future well-being of European citizens and society as a whole, we need a strong progressive majority in the European Parliament. We socialist, social democrat, labour and democratic progressive parties are working to create that majority, in order to achieve our people's manifesto - our six reform priorities for a progressive Europe:

1. Relaunching the economy and preventing new financial crises
2. New social Europe - giving people a fairer deal
3. Transforming Europe into the leading global force against climate change
4. Championing gender equality in Europe
5. Developing an effective European migration policy
6. Enhancing Europe's role as a partner for peace, security and development

We have listened to people by holding a wide-ranging public consultation on our priorities. We now intend to act on what we have heard on the basis of the proposals set out in this people's manifesto. Together we are a force for change, and we can make a difference.

We can build a fairer society by putting people first.
Let's take Europe in a new direction in June 2009.
